Why become a certified lactation educator?

Certified Lactation Educators (CLE™s) provide evidence based information to the community, families and professionals to encourage an increase in breastfeeding initiation, duration and support. CLE™s are found teaching community and hospital based breastfeeding classes, as peer breastfeeding counselors in hospital and public health setting, facilitation support groups, running pump rental stations and providing phone support.

Transform your understanding about what breastfeeding/breastmilk really is

- An irreplaceable relationship
- A brain developer
- An immune system
- An organ system
- A living tissue

Transform your professional skills

- Increase your doula competencies in the first hours after birth
- Hone your postpartum doula skills
- Learn unique strategies for teaching breastfeeding to families
- Explore adult learning styles
- Enhance your communication skills

Transform yourself

- Take the leap to explore new ways to work with families
- Connect with other women who love working with moms and babies
- Open your mind about new concepts surrounding breastfeeding
- Take the first step to becoming certified as a lactation educator with CAPP A

CLE™s find employment in community, public health, and hospital based lactation support positions or in private practice as lactation educators. The hourly rate CLE™s earn ranges from $15-$40.

This training is the first step to becoming a CAPP A Certified Lactation Educator (CLE™). See www.cappa.net.

The lactation educator provides informational and educational breastfeeding classes for expectant parents and encourages students to become as knowledgeable as possible. In addition the lactation educator serves as a resource for accurate, evidence-based information to the general public and medical community.

The CAPPa CLE does not prescribe, treat, nor diagnose breastfeeding related conditions and is trained to refer clients facing circumstances that require this degree of intervention to a qualified professional. The CAPPa 20 Hour CLE course is not an IBCLC exam prep course, nor does the CAPPa CLE training prepare a student to become an IBCLC.
